There was a trace of wistful regret in the story, an occasional touch of pride in the looking back upon the past, now and then a bit of reminiscence that was gently happy.

"Do you remember 'Sentimental Tommy' and Tommy's brutal father, the 'Miserable Man'?" she asked me. Well, he was just like that—a miserable man.

"He dominated me from the first time I ever looked into his eyes and noted the strange glint of them."

"I was 17—worked behind the counter in a little lawton (OKla.) store."

"He got to coming in quite constantly; wouldn't allow any one to wait on him but me."

Hated Hamon at First.

"Sometimes I think girls are provided with a wonderful instinct, planted in their beings by God. This instinct ought to guide them. It ought to have continued to guide me as it did at first."

"For I hated him in those first meetings—hated him just as I got to hating him in those times long afterward when he would beat me."

"I didn't like his eyes—the way he'd stare and leer at me."

"But he was a 'miserable man.'"

"There was a boy friend—sort of child beau, you know. He used to be known as my 'fellow.'"

Early Romance Spoiled.

And here the narrative paused a bit and Clara Hamon, hunted, heart-torn woman, half smiled and looked up at the moon, directly overhead.

"He was such a nice boy. He had an automobile. And, you know, ten years ago there weren't many automobiles in little Oklahoma towns. He was considered something of a catch. The other girls thought I was lucky."

"I would have been, perhaps, if he and I—Mr. Hamon had not."

"Well, Mr. Hamon asked me one day if I would go riding occasionally with him if he bought an automobile."

"I knew then—realized fully—what sort of a man he was. My instinct was guiding me truly. I laughed at him. "No girl should ever laugh at a miserable man. It makes him grim and determined, and—in the end gets him what he wants."

"I laughed at him. I was only 17. I said, 'I wouldn't go riding with you if you had a string of automobiles.'"

"What a strange thing that I should have said that and meant it—so many hours, days, weary, long times have I sat in Jake Hamon's automobiles and rattled with him over Oklahoma roads from one oil field to another."

"Again he came into the store about Christmas time and I showed him a set of furs that had just arrived. I suggested that, maybe, he'd like to buy them for his wife."

"I'll buy you all the furs you can wear," he answered, "if you'll come to see me sometime in my office."

"My face burned at the insult."

The woman turned toward me and away from the 18-year-old brother
